Now i want to manage my routing. So in the index.js i have: angular.module('myApp', ['myApp.directive','myApp.directive1','myApp.directive2','myApp.directive3','myApp.directive4']); Now i want to register a set of scopes. But all my controllers are in a separate js file, and i do not want to register all controllers in my index.js. Is there a way to do something like this: angular.module('myApp', ['myApp.directive','myApp.directive1','myApp.directive2','myApp.directive3','myApp.directive4']); angular.module('myApp.controllers', ['myApp.controllers.commonController']); so that i don't have to write all controllers in the index.js? (I read somewhere that we cannot do something like this) A: You can use the.factory function for creating the scopes instead of creating the modules and the controllers in index.js. index.js angular.module('myApp', []); angular.

We work, we do housework, we do things and we put things out there on line. Our lives are our intellectual property and it's nice to share it with people that we like. I do have a few rules about what I want to allow people to see. When I first decided to release Proxiator, I wanted to have it be very flexible so that I didn't have to be the one who chose who could see the files. Every list of websites is different and so are the rules I have set up, but with Proxiator, I can just tell it what to do. I run the entire program as a BitTorrent file. This allows me to easily run it with or without a BitTorrent client, configure it with any BitTorrent client, or if you don't have a client, you can run it with Wget. Just let it download the torrent and have it use the list for your proxies. I also include a very small virus scanner and a torrent scanner. My goal is to have it as virus and file scanner freeware. I'm hoping that some people will take what I have set up and put into their own list. I want to be able to include the lists from others but I don't want to give them away for free. I would like any feedback, not only on Proxiator, but for how I have decided to set things up. 4.0 May 9, 2013 Any opinions, comments, feedback, or suggestions that you may have would be appreciated. 4.2 May 6, 2013 This review is meant to be a public notice of changes that will take place going forward. 4.0 Dec 29, 2011 This update contains
